College principal quits: 'frustrated with government'

By James Roberts

Fraser Valley College principal Dr. Barry Moore has resigned his post saying he is frustrated with the provincial government and adds he is the ninth principal to resign in the past 18 months.

"There has been a large turnover of ministers in post secondary education and the signals we have been getting from the provincial government are quite confused and when they are not confused the signals are often late", Moore said.

Moore says his job has been made very difficult by the provincial government and the government has made it very difficult for all educators who are on "the front lines."

Moore was known in the education community for his outspoken critiques of the provincial government and he most recently came out in favour of a better student aid program.

Moore said student aid was originally drawn up to meet the demands of "typical university students in residence".

"But now", he said, "there are other classes of students with different needs - married people taking adult basic education, students already loaded down with other forms of debt, plus students who are not the sons or daughters of people who have a fair amount of money."

Moore has accepted a new job as a principal of an Ontario Community College.

AIDS awareness the key

By James Roberts

The man who was the first to investigate an AIDS related death in B.C. for the Coroner's Service, Eugene Shkurhan of Basic Health Sciences BCIT believes AIDS is a disease everyone should understand - and for the past two years he has offered a special lecture on the topic to all people at BCIT.

"I've given the lecture to whoever wants to attend but in particular I invite the term two nursing students who I teach. I've offered the lecture once a semester for the last two years", Shkurhan said.

Asked about response to his lecture he said general campus response has been down recently but two years ago 70 to 80 people would turn up to hear a detailed explanation of the AIDS virus and how to prevent its transmission.

"I don't know why attendance is down, people are becoming complacent perhaps and information about AIDS is more widespread now."

Shkurhan has no definite plans to hold a special lecture this semester but says he might plan a lecture and advertise the time and day which would likely be on a Wednesday at noon when there would be fewer schedule conflicts.

"Regardless of morals," Shkurhan said, "I have no general problems with an ad campaign for condoms". He added he believes we must do whatever is necessary to insure control of communicable diseases and "You're not going to stop people from having sex so the next thing to do is to tell people how to prevent the transmission of AIDS."

Advertising AIDS prevention

By James Roberts

Advertising about the danger of AIDS and the prevention of the transmission of AIDS through the use of a condom will be common in Britain this year as the British government has launched a $40 million blitz. Posters and ads on national and youth newspapers as well as in papers and on television will get the message to British youth.

In Canada the government has set aside $3.7 million over five years to educate the public, the medical profession, and school teachers. The Canadian Public Health Association says the program will be launched on Feb. 24th.

Don Wright, publisher of the Link newspaper, says neither government or private industry has approached the Link for advertising space, but he said, "I do remember an advertising campaign by Julius Schmidt, the producer of condoms, a few years ago."

Speaking from Toronto, the president of Julius Schmidt, Murray Black said his company, which holds a two-thirds market share in condom manufacture in Canada, did run an ad campaign in 1981 but for economic reasons radio ads were removed and now the company advertises only in magazines.

"We continue to advertise in 22 magazines in Canada including university and student newspapers" said Black.

Julius Schmidt is considering a television ad campaign but president Black is concerned that the CBC has stated it will not run Condom ads and "CTV has no firm policy on the matter yet, so we don't want to spend money until we know who is willing to accept the material."

Council questions Chicago trip for two

By James Roberts

Executive member Cheryl MacNaughton reported she received an invitation to all students who wish to attend a panel discussion about the television mini series Amerika. Students and educators who are in opposition to the series will hold a panel discussion with Susan Hargreaves of Educators for Social Responsibility, Mike Wallace of the Vancouver United Nations Association, Carol Christopher of Project Ploughshares and Bob Hackett of the Simon Fraser University Communication Department.

Panels will be held Tuesday, February 17 at 7 p.m. at Langara Community College in room A130 and Thursday February 19 at 12:30 p.m. at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, room B 9200 of the academic quadrangle.

MacNaughton also reported the Variety Club is seeking volunteers to enter data into their computers for their upcoming telethon.

Andrea Bartlett, v.p. Finance, reported on the executive's search for a new auditor. Bartlett called for estimates and accepted Price Waterhouse's $9600 bid to do the books next year. Said Bartlett, "The company has some new ideas and seems willing to come to some meetings and help the executive." Last year's audit cost $16,000.

Member at large Jim Redfern presented an idea to council concerning the marketing of the Link newspaper - he wants to have council build ten paper boxes for the campus and sell advertising on the sides of the boxes to recover the construction costs.

"Not enough people read the Link and a better distribution system will increase readership," said Redfern. He estimated the boxes will cost council about $500 and council agreed the job could be done over the summer, possibly on a Challenge '87 grant.

At mid point in the meeting council members began what turned out to be the most lengthy and emotional debate of the evening, as two executive members reported they were going to fly to Chicago to attend an entrepreneurs conference.

Many council members objected to the executive spending $826 for two airfares arguing that the S.A. is in a deficit position and some executive members should show restraint and make a personal commitment to reduce the deficit.

The two members heading for Chicago, Cheryl MacNaughton and Andrea Bartlett, argued that there is a separate budget for executive travel and they do not require council's approval to spend that money.

Assistant business manager Lorne Hildebrand reported that the business have recognized that there are needy students on campus and said, as a promotional move, food will be offered on a two-for-one basis Monday evenings and on film nights.

Finally, members at large received a boost in their meal allowance for each meeting they attend: council has raised the allotment from $3 per meeting to $5.

Editorial

Letter of "protest"

A recent letter from the Simon Fraser University Student Society to the BCIT SA asking for support in lobbying the provincial government - a lobby aimed at the government to make post-secondary education more accessible - brought a curious response from new SA president Pat Carrol. Said Carrol, "We want to make changes to the current policies of the provincial government but we don't want to appear to be too radical". Carrol and the rest of the SA believe quiet negotiation with the BCIT administration and the Board of Governors will result in the desired changes in policy. But students around the world are showing a different way is possible and they're winning.

Witness France. In mid December international headlines declared the French government had capitulated to student demands after continuous "pressure for two weeks". After two weeks of student unrest Prime Minister Chirac was forced to appear on television to back down on proposed changes to university entrance requirements.

In China thousands of students demand greater freedom and democracy via protest and demonstrations. The government is faced with international press coverage and a potentially embarrassing situation. It is a situation that promises to stay with the Chinese government for some months.

A strike in Latin America's largest university - Mexico City - is now in its second week with the strongest student movement in two decades that is standing firm in its opposition to proposed academic reforms. Leaders of the 320,000 students say their strike will continue until plans for fee increases and more restrictive admission policy are dropped.

The Mexico City strike has spread and sparked mass resignations from the capitol city's only English language newspaper. The editor and 14 journalists quit after saying they had "been ordered to slant coverage of the strike in favor of the university administration".

The French protest spread to Spain last week as college students protested enmasse. Leaders say they are "frustrated over the government's refusal to allow free admission to university".

Students worldwide have discovered the necessity of protest in their efforts to change the policy of short sighted governments who seek to limit university enrolment and raise tuition fees, thus creating an elitist education system. Protest has taken a wide variety of forms, but always it has included standing enmasse with fellow students from other institutions with joint proposals.

Here at home the local student council worries about "appearing radical" and believes a letter of concern mailed to Education Minister Hagan will be sufficient to insure tuition fees are lowered and access to university education is increased to all British Columbians, not only the wealthy.

We shall watch with interest when the BCIT Board of Governors discusses likely tuition fee increases next month. And we hold out no hope that the Ministry of Education will do anything in support of our SA's demands given the weak manner in which those demands were made.

Strife in the S.A.

Monday's council meeting erupted into a spirited attack on two executive members who booked air tickets to Chicago which they say do not have cancellation insurance, and as a result, MacNaughton and Bartlett argue they shall attend a young entrepreneurs conference even if the rest of council thinks the trips should be cancelled. The executive members argue there is a special budget for travel, a budget they have a right to use.

Executive member Neil is one of the dissatisfied: he says they booked the tickets in a "sneaky" manner and he believes there are others who are more deserving of the Chicago trip.

The debate promises to be with us for a couple of weeks, but in the meantime it is a healthy sign that council and executive members are scrutinizing their budgets in an effort to reduce a deficit of over $30 thousand.

Many executive members believe the Chicago trip is nothing more than a holiday for executive members, "a perk of the job". MacNaughton and Bartlett say yes, it's a perk, but we deserve the perk. Stay tuned. The flight to Chicago has not left the tarmac.

Opposition not happy with Socred education policies

By James Roberts

Almost four months into their mandate to govern B.C., the provincial Social Credit Party has critics wondering if the government will be an "open and consultative" administration, as promised by Premier Vander Zalm.

New Democrat education critics Darlene Marzari (MLA Point Grey) and Barry Jones (MLA Burnaby North) fear policy will be generated by the "musings" of the Premier, and they call on the government to invest in education.

Link: What kind of action should students be taking at this time?

Marzari: That is an interesting question. The participation rate is the lowest in the country and tuition fees have virtually doubled in the past six years. Things have never been worse for post secondary education in this province.

I think students have to yell bloody loud and draw attention as best they can to the situation that they are in... it's also the cost of living, to even think about going to a post secondary institution is a major decision for any potential student.

Link: Has there been any sign, in terms of education, the government is going to be open and consultative?

Jones: The only real promise made in education was an agreement made by all parties that there was a need for a commission to review the entire educational system. Such a commission has not been established.

A number of things have been going on: the latest being the AIDS information question and it seems that policy development is made by musings of the premier when he gets a chance to talk to reporters.

In addition there's a number of processes that are underway that seem to contradict the idea of a commission. The mayors are studying decentralization in education, the labour minister is studying bargaining for teachers, the cabinet committee on social services is going around the province accepting briefs on education and much of this is going on without any real consultation with the education community.

Marzari: The House is being called late as there is a consultation on student fees and student tuition which set up a special board, and a special advisory group will be producing a report for the cabinet to peruse. I heartily applaud the consultation process but I await with some - some - anxiety about the outcome. I wonder if any of the people who have been consulted will have their voices heard.

Link: You presented a brief into the consultation process. What are the top two goals you hope the government will accept and try to implement?

Marzari: The tone of our brief calls on the government to take post secondary education seriously... to keep students in the province and enrich the province... that is our top priority.

The second priority is that we would like to see a return of the grant system and some rebates on students loans.

Link: Could a Private Members Bill help to get some improvements in place?

Marzari: No Private Members Bill is going to put anything into place. Private Members Bills, in my opinion, and looking at the record simply serve to draw attention to a problem.

I think what you will see with this NDP opposition is that we'll be putting together a series of Private Members Bills that will build toward a package of legislation when we are elected in three years from now.

Link: We've seen SFU and UBC raise their tuition fees this year, what do you believe needs to be done with tuition fees?

Jones: The whole question of funding for education is a critical issue and the government can be a lot more generous in this regard. The $54 million that went to post secondary education last year came entirely from the federal government. With the kind of debt load, and low participation rates in B.C. there is no excuse for the government not to improve funding for post secondary education. And it must be more accessible to those from lower socioeconomic backgrounds. I see no sign the government is doing anything in that regard.

Link: What has caused deficit financing? BCIT has a $2 million deficit and other schools also have a deficit. Should it be allowed to go on?

Marzari: Deficit financing is caused by this provincial government's attitude towards post secondary education. They don't like it and they don't want it unless it is related to job training and pushing kids into jobs immediately upon graduation and they haven't been too successful at that.

What they have done is to take $300 million that was supposed to increase into $700 million and put it into a fund administered by the cabinet behind closed doors - it's called the Fund for Excellence.

The fund then becomes, on cabinet mandate, not on the mandate of the department of Education, or on the mandate of any advisory council or heads of boards of governors - the Fund for Excellence then starts to fund deficits and that's what they intend to do.

Link: Is this a negative use of the fund?

Marzari: It doesn't get us out of the problem, it creates a larger problem, that being the cabinet itself starts to make decisions about what goes on at community colleges and threatens the autonomy of the local regions where the colleges are, and the universities. The universities and colleges become puppets of a small number of people who lock themselves behind closed doors and call themselves the cabinet.

Link: A lot of schools are looking into corporate funding. Is this a good thing or is it dangerous?

Jones: I think there is some danger. If corporations were very generous and had no strings attached to education funding it would be worthwhile. But I think education, must be free from political and corporate interests.

Link: Is the Vander Zalm government following the Bennett government forcing the educational institutions to look for funds in the corporate sector?

Jones: It certainly seems the direction we're going and B.C. has become the backwater of educational enlightenment and maybe the only hope is corporate funding. But certainly that is not the way it should be done.

Link: What is the Social Credit government doing about student summer employment and what is the opposition pushing for at this time?

Jones: I see in the current government a continuation of the past. There has been programs and assistance to students in the past but not to the degree necessary. Our job is opposition is to point out the inadequacies and we're looking for something to be done for students in the province.

Help your heart!

Okay trivia buffs - What's a Sphygmomanometer?

Besides being quite a mouthful to say, it's that funny looking contraption your doctor uses to check your blood pressure. The device was first developed in the 1890's by Russian military physicians to measure the blood pressure of injured soldiers. It takes its name (in English) from the Greek for "pulse measurement."

Two numbers make up a blood pressure reading. They look like a fraction (ie. 110/60, spoken as "110 over 60"), but actually refer to the pressure exerted by the blood within the arteries during the two phases of the heart cycle.

Systolic pressure, the first number, indicates how hard the heart is working when it contracts to pump blood into the tissues. The second number, the diastolic pressure, designates the lower pressure exerted when the heart relaxes to refill.

To measure blood pressure, a cloth cuff is wrapped tightly around the patient's upper arm. Air is pumped into a rubber bag inside the cuff. As it expands, the gauge reading on the sphygmomanometer rises in response to the increasing air pressure.

As more air is gradually let out of the cuff, the pulse momentarily gets louder and then fades. The reading at which the sound of pumping blood disappears altogether is the diastolic pressure.

THE HEART FACTS

An adult human body has some 60,000 miles of blood vessels, through which the heart, in a lifetime, pumps some 170 million litres of blood.

During an average human life span, a heart beats over 2,500,000,000 times. At rest, the heart pumps five litres

(over a gallon) of blood per minute. And when a person engages in intense activity, it may pump up to 30 litres per minute - over six gallons of blood in one minute.

DRUGS CAN AFFECT BLOOD PRESSURE

Oral contraceptives, some decongestants, appetite suppressants and other prescription or over-the-counter medications can raise your blood pressure. So can street drugs like marijuana and cocaine.

Be sure to give your doctor a list of all the drugs you take. Any one of them could contribute to a health problem.

WHAT IS HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE?

Certain arteries in the body, called arterioles, regulate your blood pressure. They are the smallest branches of the aorta, the main artery leaving the heart carrying blood in the circulatory system.

The way arterioles control blood pressure is sometimes compared to the manner in which a nozzle regulates water pressure in a hose. If you turn the nozzle to make the opening larger, less pressure is needed to force the water through the hose. If you turn the hose nozzle to make its opening narrower, or smaller, the pressure on the hose increases.

Thinking of the arterioles as a hose, if the arterioles become narrower or shut off for some reason, the blood cannot easily pass through them. When this happens, the heart must pump harder to push the blood through. This increases the blood pressure in their arteries. If the pressure increases above normal and stays there, the result is high blood pressure.

HOW CAN HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE DAMAGE

Quote of the Week

Whoever loves money never has money enough whoever loves wealth is never satisfied with his income. This too is meaningless.

As goods increase, so do those who consume them. And what benefit are they to the owner except to feast his eyes on them?

The sleep of a labourer is sweet, whether he eats little or much, but the abundance of a rich man permits him no sleep.

I have seen a grievous evil under the sun: wealth hoarded to the harm of its owner, or wealth lost thru some misfortune, so that when he has a son there is nothing left for him.

Naked a man comes from his mother's womb, and as he comes, so he departs. He takes nothing from his labour that he can carry in his hand.

This too is a grievous evil: as a man comes, so he departs, and what does he gain, since he toils for the wind?

All his days he eats in darkness, with great frustration, affliction, and anger.

YOUR BODY

Uncontrolled high blood pressure adds to the workload of the heart and arteries. The heart, forced to work harder than normal over a long period, tends to enlarge. A slightly enlarged heart may function well, but a heart that is very much enlarged has a hard time keeping up with the demands put upon it.

As people grow older, the arteries and their smaller branches the arterioles become hardened and less elastic. This process takes place gradually, even in people who do not have high blood pressure. However, elevated blood pressure tends to speed up this hardening process.

The possibility of stroke - blood vessel damage in the brain - is increased if you have high blood pressure. Uncontrolled high blood pressure can also affect the blood vessels of the eyes, heart, kidneys and nervous system. These effects can be prevented or reduced if high blood pressure is detected and treated early - and if treatment is continued.

Where did the monitors go?

Link Staff Report

The disappearance of six television monitors has left BCIT's student executive wondering why the monitors were removed and when they will be replaced.

Business Manager Phil Henderson believes Target Vision, the company the SA is dealing with, is involved in a financial dispute with another company who removed the monitors. Unnamed sources speculated Future Shop provided the monitors and were responsible for their removal.

Target Vision General

Manager David Lepp said his company is responsible for operating BCIT's closed circuit information system and he says the "monitors were removed without our permission".

"We have reported the issue to police who have taken a theft report and our lawyer says technically the monitors were stolen."

Lepp said BCIT will be provided with a new set of monitors by Friday.

Future shop managers were unavailable for comment.

Funding priorities upsets instructor

Link Staff Report

Broadcast Journalism Program Head Jim Yount's bid for a "paltry sum of money to subsidize a trip to the B.C. legislature" for Broadcast Journalism students has been rejected by the administration and the alumni association.

"Isn't it time the Alumni Association and the administration sat down to review the whole issue of funding of student field trips?" asked Yount in a letter sent to Vice President Drug Svetic and the Alumni Association.

This year Yount requested $325, "so a group of second year students could observe the legislature in action, and meet some of the newsmakers they'll undoubtedly be covering within a few short months."

Yount added, "It would seem the two invincible positions taken by the institute and the Alumni Association don't make such a valuable trip possible. Is it a simply naive suggestion if I say funding of a cement toboggan is more appropriate than student education."

Referring to funding allocated to the Civil and Structural students who travel each year to partake in a competition to design a cement toboggan, Yount said it would be interesting to hear the reaction of industry if "we were to compare the educational value of the two projects".

In rejecting the application the Alumni Association said, "The merit of the field trip was not in question." The Association maintains field trips are an educational responsibility of the institute.

Broadcast Communications Department Head Brian Antonson said field trips had to be cut from the broadcast budgets following a series of cuts which have reduced the department's operating budget from over $100 thousand in the early 1980's to $71 thousand this year.

Volleyball team a winner

If you haven't already heard, our women's volleyball team is having a great season. Currently ten and two, the Cougars lead the Totem College Conference going into the final tournament this weekend in Castlegar. Only a major wipe out will keep them out of the finals in March.

The Totem Women's Volleyball Conference consists of nine teams. League games are played in four separate tournaments of four games each. The four top teams make the finals, this year at Capilano. Two teams from the B.C. finals will go to the Canadian National Championships.

The ten and two Cougars are a big turnaround from last year's squad, which didn't fare nearly as well. This year's version is quick and aggressive, the quicker the better in women's volleyball. Power isn't as important as putting the ball in the right spot.

One of the reasons for the team's success is a large influx of first year talent. This was a little lucky, considering that only three women returned from last year. Another reason has to be head coach Claudio Sartore.

This is Claudio's second year with the Cougars. Last year, during his last year in the Electrical/Electronics program, Claudio walked onto the gym and before he knew it, he was running the practices and co-coaching. He was asked back this year as the only coach, though he receives excellent help from Yersin Yung, whom Claudio hopes to make assistant coach next year.

This is Claudio's first crack at coaching, but he has been involved with volleyball since elementary school. He played on the high school team at John Oliver and with a club team, the B.C. Olympics. Claudio likes coaching so far, being able to control a team and see them improve makes it fun. So does winning.

And that's what the Cougars are doing. Winning. Claudio is very proud of the team. His players are smart, quick to correct mistakes, and learn from them. Claudio feels the gold medal at the B.C. Championships is a definite possibility. And with the number of first year women returning next year looks even better. But first things first. This year isn't even over yet. Good luck to the Cougars at Selkirk this weekend and in the finals in March. Here's hoping they can bring back the gold.

- Randy Derrick

Ruggers smoke Douglas College

The BCIT Cougars rugby team started the second half of their season with a bang on Saturday by beating the Douglas College R.F.C. by a score of 28 to 0.

For the first time this season the team played as a "team", not a group of individuals with the results being spectacular the game was less than 10 minutes old when the Cougars scored two quick tries to make the score 12-0 and a win in the log.

Coach Miller said "it was good to see our forwards take control up front and deliver good ball to our backs, who ran with a lot of authority and confidence. If we can continue to play like today we will make the play-offs for sure".

The win held double importance for the Cougar Ruggers, not only was it a good win to start off the '87 leg of the season, but Douglas is presently in fourth place with the BCIT side hot on their heels in fifth place in the twelve team Fraser Valley Rugby Union.

Records

Back to the Centre
Paul Brady

At a time when so many bands have sold the farm, it's refreshing to hear from an artist who chooses not to compromise his position for fortune and fame. This record is one of the least contrived and completely original I've heard in a long while.

"Back to The Centre" is Irishman Paul Brady's new release on Mercury Records. But don't let the title fool you, "Middle of the Road" isn't where Brady fits in the musical spectrum. Each song on the album has unique musical flair, ranging from traditional folk, to folk-rock, to straight-out rock 'n roll.

"Back to the Centre" certainly is more "rock" than the "folk" of Brady's earlier records, but he says he hasn't lost his loyal following. Brady says he didn't intentionally want the album to sound "rock". "Basically it's music how I feel it and songs how I feel them. I never particularly hear a market when I'm making a record I just play it the way I want it."

It's not surprising that Brady's music has fallen between the cracks of market research and failed to gain the ear of local radio station programmers. "Back to the Centre"'s novel combination of melody, imagination, and emotion defies simple classification: it doesn't fit predictable radio formats.

"Back to the Centre" is Brady's fifth album. His first, "Welcome Here Kind Stranger" won Melody Maker's album of the year in 1978 and contained traditional Irish music. 1981 saw Brady's "Hard Station" LP reach number one in Ireland, and though it gained critical success, it failed to receive much airplay. "True Blue" followed in 1983 with Brady continuing to hone his musical and lyrical skills. The same year, he went on tour as the opening act for Eric Clapton, and then as a guest on the Dire Straits "Alchemy" tour.

Straits guitarist Mark Knopfler was so impressed with Brady he asked him to collaborate on the music from the film "Cal" in 1984. Then in 1985, Brady wrote the songs for "Back to the Centre".

"The Homes of Donegal" showcases Brady's folk-roots in a lilting traditional Irish folksong: "The time has come for me to go / And bid you all adieu / The open highway calls me back / To do these things I do." In "The Island", Brady's Irish blood stirs with highly charged political references to Ireland and Lebanon. "They say the skies of Lebanon are burning / Those mighty cedars bleeding in the heat / Women and children dying in the street / And we're still at it in our own place / Still trying to reach the future through the past".

What sets this record apart from others is Brady's eclectic musical methods which frees him to combine elements of bouzouki and tin whistles with electric guitar and bass. And of course there're the lyrics. They're intelligent and poetic evoking images of Brady's own experiences and his personal convictions. "Back to the Centre" is aother one of those great records you'll never hear on the radio.

Uptempo Star Trek

By Don Wright

If you ever appreciated or followed the old Star Trek series on television, Star Trek IV is the only big screen episode to catch. The first Star Trek big screen product was such a dud, I didn't go back for two and three. But the promotion and other reviews I've read indicated number four was different.

And different it is. We join the stalwart survivors of the Enterprise as they are refitting a captured Klingon cruiser equipped with cloaking device and warp speed capability. All you need to know from the previous installment is that the captain and his crew disobeyed Starfleet Command, lost the Enterprise, but found Spock. As episode four gets underway, the crew is finishing modifications to the Klingon ship and are soon on their way back to earth to face the music for their reberlious actions.

Coincidentally, a large ominous probe arrives at earth, causing considerable energy disruption in the process. Spaceships and orbiting space stations go dead, and ionization of the earth's atmosphere causes massive cloud buildup and confusion. The probe is "calling" to earth, but no one on earth knows how to respond. The earth is doomed.

However, before they get too close to have their energy cut off, Captain Kirk and his small crew pick up the weird noise the probe is emitting and Spock, ever the clever Vulcan, suggests modifying the signal, taking into account the probe seems specifically directed at the earth's oceans, adjusting for water density and so on. It's the call of the long-extinct humpback whale. The probe has obviously returned to earth to re-connect with the species it had communicated with centuries before.

Time travel is the ticket, and Kirk and his team decide to travel back in time to bring forward a humpback whale of two to answer the probe before it presumably destroys earth.

This is fun stuff. The crew may be serious about the mission, but they're really party animals at heart. Kirk even has time for a circa 1986 class of beer, although he has the pizza wrapped to go. Sure, some of the events are rather circumstantial, but this movie has thankfully left stuffy sci-fi pretense and Stars Wars type wanton violence to other celluloid efforts.

Kirk and his crew, as space musketeers, may disobey a few orders but they somehow manage to save the day nonetheless.

Spock (Leonard Nimoy) co-wrote and directed this episode. His uptempo approach to the Star Trek phenomenon has produced an exceptionally enjoyable and entertaining film.

I highly recommend it.
