

Police harassment forces ID vigilance

Link

VOLUME 14, NUMBER 10, NOVEMBER 7, 1979

BCIT STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

No, this is not a picture of the Halloween dance, although many of the photos in this issue are. These fine members of the local RCMP dropped into the BCIT pub to pay a visit, bother a few patrons, question the staff, and generally make sure the streets are safe from what we can only guess to be the dastardly people they must be after.

SA dupes the Link

LINK STAFF REPORT

In a blatant attempt to bring discredit to the BCIT student newspaper, the Student Association Executive led the Link staff to believe that VP Internal Tom Kosberg had resigned. He had, in fact, simply left to go to the washroom. Unfortunately, this occurred just as the Link was about to be sent to the printers, and thus the hastily prepared report of his alleged withdrawal from BCIT was dropped in complete with his name misspelled.

Subsequently, as Tom told the Link, "The report of my demise was a bit premature".

However, this event does not sit easy with Link Editor Don Wright. He views the matter as just one more attack, by the S.A., on the spirit of the free press.

"Previously their attacks were limited to verbal abuse and criticisms of certain Link staff members; however, this time they've gone too far. If they want a battle, then so be it. We're prepared. They can't say we didn't warn them." It was later learned by the Link that the executive, in a secret meeting on Friday night, put together a plan to turn the Link offices into an executive lounge, complete with hot tub, racquetball courts, and hard liquor bar.

To this plan, Don replies "This is just one more example of their continual harassment of the press".

He did add however, that if they were to admit him to the lounge, he might not mind to much.

Good news

By Cindy Ott

The scramble lot will be paved, as soon as weather permits. Unbelievable, but finally true. Richard Symth, Director of Physical Resources at BCIT, confirmed the impossible Friday. The lot was graded on the weekend, a relief to the autos in itself, and will actually be blacktopped as soon as the skies break for a reasonable length of time.

The grand event will entail a three-day closure of the elite parking location, which will announce itself with the presence of a blockade and a parking commissioner waving you on. You'll grumble for three days—possibly only one day if the resurrection occurs over the weekend. But won't it be worth it in the long run?

Your car loses its mogul hopping practice, but cross-country driving is so much more relaxing, n'est ce pas?

(For those of you in second year who still don't believe the news—read this article three more times and drink a good-bye toast to potholes.)

Recent raids by the Burnaby RCMP, both uniformed and undercover, have forced the campus pub to take a closer look at the Liquor Control and Licensing Act. The RCMP have admitted that they are after the pub's license, and, according to the officers who raided BCIT, have the power to revoke the license entirely if the pub does not strictly adhere to the act.

Although the Liquor Licensing branch confirms the Link's suspicions that the police do not have that all-encompassing power, they do have a substantial influence in licensing matters.

After the first raid on Friday the 26th of October, the pub security was instructed to check the ID of all patrons entering the pub, regardless of personal recognition. One purpose of the tightened security was to make sure that no underage people were in the pub area, but a second, somewhat more important reason is brought to light by Ross Duncan, the BCIT pub Manager.

"Ours is a class 'A' license, which means entrance to members only. We are supposed to ask for 'club' ID. We ask for student ID, which is our first choice, but a lot of students don't have ID cards, so a BCIT Library card and driver's license will do" says Ross.

"Our license is hanging by a thin thread," continues Duncan. "We're not trying to harass the students, but the RCMP are after our license, and they'll pull it if they can. It won't be just a suspension. They didn't make any arrests, although they could have."

"We didn't really want to check everyone, we would rather just do spot checks when necessary" says Duncan.

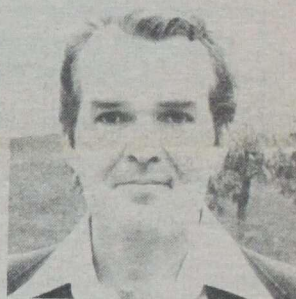

The latest raid occurred on October 30th, at which time one uniformed and two undercover RCMP members checked ID of those inside. Pub security had been very successful, so that the police could make no arrests.

Ross hopes that the process of checking everyone's ID will eventually be phased out, but so many pub staff members do not always recognize the regulars. Says Ross "The security staff do not work everyday, so not all will recognize the regulars, and so they should expect to have to produce ID."

In doing this, the management hopes to not only protect the pub license, but save any thirsty underage people from a one hundred dollar fine if the

RCMP visit.

However, there is still something that the pub is not doing that it should. The 'Pit' out at UBC not only requires student ID, but in compliance with liquor regulations, has each accompanying 'non-member' sign in.

Ross Duncan, Pub Manager

The BCIT pub used to take possession of off-campus guest's ID, but this practice is no longer followed.

When questioned about this matter, Ross indicated the the pub will have to eventually keep a register at the front door as well. He sees it as one more hassle that some students will object to, but, as Ross points out, it is the pub license that is on the line.

Alcoholism

by Nancy McGeer

Alcoholism is reaching epidemic proportions on university and college campuses throughout North America.

A report from the Ubysey (UBC's campus paper) indicates that increasing numbers of students have a drinking problem. UBC medical experts and administrators agree that increasing numbers of students are turning to Alcoholics Anonymous, and are seeking psychiatric help to deal with their drinking problems.

Erich Voght, vice-president of faculty and student affairs at UBC, said he is also concerned about the problem.

"It's a major concern of ours. We have people on campus who are only 19 years of age and belong to the AA."

Ron Cutler, former director of the Water Street Research group on alcoholism, said that alcohol related social functions contribute to poor student attitudes toward drinking. He went on to say that "The effects are cumulative...the students go on to accept it (alcohol) as more and more a part of a social function, and even though some students come to university with no experience with alcohol, students often join in the festivities to become part of their peer group".

Experts say that youth alcoholism often begins in high school, and is compounded in the first couple of years in university. Attitudes learned in university can lead to serious middle age alcoholism.

Although increasing numbers of students are seeking help for their drinking problems, many won't admit they are alcoholics. Students say "Oh, I'm not an alcoholic, I'm too young to be an alcoholic."

The facts speak for themselves—while until recently most members ranged around age 50, most AA members now range from 18 to 30 years old.

People sometimes forget. Labels never do.

It's easy to forget even the simplest things: a name, a birthday, a phone number. And most of the time it doesn't matter much.

But when it comes to taking medicine — how much, how often, even when not to take it — it really matters if you forget. A lot.

That's why all medicines — prescription and non-prescription alike — have the directions right on the label. So you can always be sure you're taking it right. To make sure your medicine works right for you.

What's more, a label can never forget.

So why trust your memory? Or anyone else's? Read the label instead.

The "Austwitz of Asia"

The legacy of Cambodia continues

Since 1970, the world has been more often than not, awestricken at the catastrophic situations that have existed inside the country of Cambodia. Today the world looks on again as this country finds itself amidst war, horror and a famine that has the potential of annihilating the total Cambodian population.

In 1970, Cambodia became engulfed in the Indo-China war. Officials today still argue over figures that properly illustrate the suffering that the country was inflicted with as a result. But modest estimates suggest that between 1.5 and 2 million people lost their lives. Shortly after this in 1975, it was the Communist takeover by China backed Pol Pot and his murderous Khmer Rouge regime, who systematically decimated more under their 'purification' policy.

Since that time at least 2 million Cambodians have been reported dead or missing. Then there was the invasion that preceded the devastation that is so evident today.

In 1978, Vietnam, backed by Russian support, encroached on the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh to successfully oust Pol Pot. The capital now reigns under the leadership of President Heng Samrin and his army that boasts two hundred thousand men.

After the takeover, heavy and fierce guerilla warfare proceeded between the ousted Khmer Rouge and the new Samrin Regime, as a result food soon became a factor for both forces. In an effort to starve each side into submission, much of the agricultural land was destroyed. Today officials estimate only 10 to 20 percent of their potential food supply has been harvested, which has now allowed starvation to run rampant. Initial relief efforts were continuously intercepted by both sides in order to bolster their army.

As the war continues many of the Cambodian refugees have fled to neighbouring Thailand's border. Here some 165,000, (suffering from malaria, dysentery and, of course, starvation) have crossed the border to seek food and medical attention. Amid this, the sagging Pol Pot Regime has been forced to retreat. Now they too find themselves near the Thai border. Here they have beaten, killed and stripped the peasants of any food or medical supplies they may have had.

By Gary M. Mason

As a result a definite famine exists, and the bubonic plague seems imminent unless food, and lots of it, arrives soon.

In an effort to find out what was being done I talked to both UNICEF and International Red Cross functionaries here in Vancouver. It was soon learned that both these agencies' efforts in Cambodia have essentially become one co-operated struggle to help. Both are acting channels for large food supplies.

The Facts: When starvation hits an area invariably the children are affected. Reports from Cambodia say that hardly any children under five are living or are expected to live. Also 80 to 90 percent of all children alive are suffering from malnutrition. The Red Cross estimates that there are 2.5 million people in need of assistance, 700 thousand of those being the children and old people. Amongst this travesty is the problem that there are only fifty doctors in the country and medical outposts are nearly extinct.

Both UNICEF and the Red Cross figure they have already spent 1.5 million dollars and in the next six months they hope to send at least 200 tons of food and medicine. Since July of this year they have sent 13 relief flights to Phnom Penh where relief team officials await, to assure supplies reach the people.

Other Efforts and Problems:

Many other organizations and countries are involved in aiding the plight of the refugees. In this the "Year of the Child" the United Nations is playing a very strong part in this appeal to Cambodia. Because of a political snag the U.N., have sent rice, sugar, and other articles like fish nets in an effort to allow at least some Cambodians to self-sustain themselves.

The World Food Programme has so far sent six thousand tons of supplies, and project they will need to send at least thirty thousand tons a month to be effective. And statistics released has the United States' government down for a thirty million dollar donation so far.

Now as the fighting continues to get closer to the Thai border, the relief effort becomes increasingly necessary, and increasingly difficult. Some families have conceded and have started to filter back into Phnom Penh. Among those that arrive, 90 percent display the swollen bellies and discoloured hair that results from malnutrition. Journalists that have ventured to the area have now ominously referred to the present state as the "Austwitz of Asia".

The efforts of all the organizations could help alleviate much of the problem only if their aid arrives in time.

Cambodians, under their present circumstances, are dying at a staggering rate of more than 200 a day. If food is not permitted to enter, in the amounts needed, the legacy of the Cambodians may soon come to an end.

Are You Open-Minded?

People like to think they are open-minded, but are you?

Perhaps this is the first time you've taken the time to read this article. Before, you just ignored it because it was from IVCF. Is that being open-minded? If you have been reading the articles regularly, have you considered their messages or did you automatically dismiss them as 'religious' bunk?

Have you ever accepted the invitation given by IVCF to come out and chat with us or, have you decided to stay clear of 'those Christians'?

Maybe you know what Christianity is all about and have decided that it's not for you. Maybe you even claim to be a Christian. But do you really know the claims of Christianity? What is your knowledge based on? If you have never investigated the Christian 'walk' of life, then you can not claim to be open-minded.

So why not be honest with yourself and take the opportunity to learn of the Christian faith, firsthand. IVCF offers such an opportunity on November 14th, at 12:00 p.m., in lecture hall 197. At that time Bob MacLaren, an evangelist known throughout North America, will be on campus presenting the basis of the Christian way of life.

So why not come out? What have you got to lose? If you claim to be open-minded, then you owe it to yourself to come and hear Christianity presented by someone qualified to speak on it. Then, and only then, can you make a decision as to the relevance, or irrelevance of Christianity in your life.

EDITORIAL

Students at BCIT are too passive. Its bloody difficult to run a paper when the biggest controversy of the week is the latest dumb remark by a particular up and coming radio broadcaster/ columnist, or a change in the wardrobe of the editor.

Come on people, try to be at least semi-interesting. Have we got any left-wing radical subversive types in the crowd aspiring to takeover the administration building, or even the washrooms on the third floor of the '76 building?

Maybe some environmental activists concerned with the litter on campus, the condition of the duck pond, or the air in the area? Women's rights advocates? Kinky stamp collectors?

Please, we are really deperate. We know there are lots of things happening on campus. With a wide variety of clubs and teams active on campus, there is an interesting story on each. How about letting everyone know what you're up to?

Off campus stuff..resaurants, movies, drama, art...all could do with some coverage. We're not looking for a 'signed in blood' commitment, even one story a year is greatly appreciated.

Other off campus stuff is fair game too, your favourite sports team, your favourite organization, your favourite barber, or even your favourite bartender.

I could go on forever with possible stories. The point is, whether it looks like it or not, this paper is treading a thin line between being a rag churned out every week, and being a readable campus paper.

We know it is asking too much to solicit scandal, everyone is so pure and honest and above the board that it makes me sick. Maybe we could talk one of the SA executive to rob the SA blind, and upon being discovered, kidnapping the editor and escaping to Hawaii.

This is getting silly, but that is just a sign of frustration setting in.

As always, we rely on our readers for writers, and, as always, we find ourselves begging for contributions once again.

Give it some thought. Even letting us know about something that needs coverage would be a help. Just keep us in mind, we can't continue much longer without your help.

Student Loan Program Hit

Dear Editor:

Please find enclosed a copy of my letter to the Hon. David MacDonald on the issue of the Canada Student Loans Program. Please feel free to publish the whole letter or excerpts as you see fit.

Yours sincerely,
Svend J. Robinson, MP
Burnaby

The Hon. David MacDonald
Secretary of State
House of Commons
Ottawa, Ontario

Dear Mr. MacDonald:

I have recently received representations from the National Union of Students regarding proposed changes to the Canada Student Loans Plan. After carefully considering the arguments which they have put forward I would like to bring to your attention the following points.

I believe that the most important change must come in the decision making process itself. It is imperative, in my view, that the students themselves be allowed to have representation on the Canada Student Loans Plenary Group. Over the past two decades society has come to accept students as responsible citizens with justified concerns in a number of areas. Universities have opened up many decision making bodies to student representatives and it is time that this trend spreads to the national level so that students can be involved when decisions which seriously affect their lives are being discussed. I, myself, was the first student representative on the Board of Governors at the University of British Columbia and I found it to be an invaluable experience.

The availability of the Canada Student Loans Program to a wider sector of the community, and the sensitivity of the program to minority and disadvantaged groups is another area which must be reviewed. I am concerned that there is no provision in the present loan program for part-time students and that there are no special provisions for the handicapped students, whose costs are obviously higher than those provided for in the program. Furthermore, I am concerned that there does not seem to be any mechanism for student aid which addresses the particular problems faced by women.

The actual distribution of the funds and the methods used in determining eligibility must also come under review. We must, as a necessary first step, accept the proposition that once an individual has reached the age of majority he/she should be considered independent for the purpose of determining eligibility for the loans program. I feel we should also relax the rules which direct how much a student is expected to save in a given year from his own sources. Different students have different needs and the program must reflect this diversity if it is to be successful. The ceiling on allowable costs must also be more flexible and it should take into account changes in the cost of living. Also, the rules on loan repayment should be relaxed so that a graduate who can not find adequate employment after leaving school should not be placed under unnecessary financial hardship.

Finally, we should resist the impulse to raise the loan ceiling as a panacea for our student aid problems. Such a move would only place our young people further into a debt which they cannot maintain and would result in an erosion of the very accessibility which the plan was designed to encourage. The solution is in increasing the grant portion of the program, and I hope that you can persuade your Provincial colleagues of this point.

I hope that you seriously take into consideration the points which I have made and that we can look forward to some positive changes to the Canada Student Loans Program in the near future.

Yours sincerely,
Svend J. Robinson, MP
Burnaby

'Cheer' leading, Ha!

Dear Link:

Cheerleading has become a lost art. There used to be enthusiasm in the voices that the screaming fans in chants supporting their team. If you attended the basketball game on October 27th, it was painfully obvious that those days are long gone. The few spectators that did attend the game lost their team spirit on the way over, so the B.C. Lions cheerleaders were sent in to save the day.

They did not lead any cheers, but tried to provide a titillating diversion by lining up and disco dancing their way into our hearts. 'However, the amount of talent apparent was about as skimpy as their outfits. Why should we be subjected to such a talentless show, or have we all gone beyond the point of caring?

Assassination attempt?

Dear Editor of the LINK,

It was with the greatest despair that we received information to the effect that our V. P. Internal was indeed to resign from the prestigious Student Association Executive.

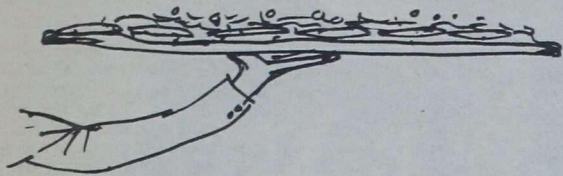

With heavy hearts, we took the information passed to us, via the world's freest press that indeed we were to suffer this great loss.

Now we are perplexed as to whether this was another attempt to assassinate the character of the Student Association. Give the press an inch-they always take a mile.

PIZZA: What do you want?

By Nancy McGeer

The Pizza Bar in the SAC pub has been operating for three weeks now, but so far, student response has not been overwhelming. The service was started because it was thought that students would like something other than popcorn and pretzels to munch on while indulging in an after-class ale. The concept was received well at first, but poor sales prove that something is lacking in the service. If sales do not improve within the next two weeks, the service will be discontinued.

The SA wants to know what the problem is, so the Link staff has comprised yet another of its famous and popular surveys so that YOU* the student body can have some input into the matter.

Please fill out the following, so that the SA can provide you what you desire. (in the way of pub snacks only please)

Make the time to fill it in (anonymously) and drop the completed survey in the Link or Student Association offices in the SAC.

Q. Do you know about the SAC PUB's Pizza Bar?

A. a) yes b) no

Q. Are you happy with the prices of the pizzas?

Q. Would you like the service expanded to include other food?

Q. Have you ever bought a Pizza at the Pizza Bar? Rating?

Q. Are you satisfied with the sizes of the pizzas?

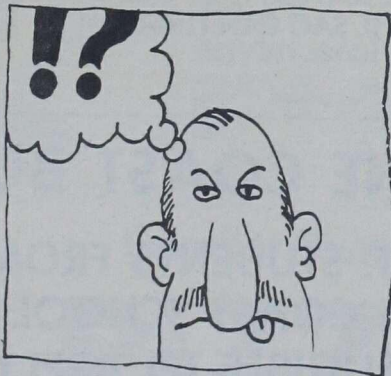

Q. Please add any suggestions for change or improvement.....

Q. Are you satisfied with the selection of pizzas?

Q. Do you want this service in the pub 1) at all 2) on selected days, if so what days?

THANK YOU.

I'm in that class...

Dear Editor,

I am a member of that 2nd term, 1st year psychiatric Nursing class that has built up a reputation as being 'radical misfits.'

I agree fully with Alice's letter and feel that one point needs enlarging. Alice said 'There's more to life than just school.' Right-on Alice!

Members of my class could at times convince me that all there is to life is eating, sleeping and studying--socializing is taboo, and socializing with classmates is even more taboo yet.

Well, surprise everyone--but life is really great, even if you have assignments to hand in and exams coming up. If you spend less of your time worrying and more of your time taking things as they come and accepting them as they are you might agree with me. It doesn't take that much effort.

I have tried to organize things to get the class to do things as a class--last term I organized a baseball team (3 people showed up for our 1st, and only game--we had fun too); this term we have started a public relations group, so far 8 people have put in their efforts, with a few more asking questions. But, if all those apathetic people in my class think they are going to get off that easy--forget it, I don't give up.

Face it you guys--now is the best time to start implementing the skills we are learning and the best place to implement them is in our day to day contacts and seeing as we spend so much time together we may as well learn to get along as a group--not as 54 groups.

Being friends can be fun and working as a group can be great. Give it a try, you'll get as much out of it as you put into it.

Sincerely and still smiling,

Marie Hughes

ARTS AND REVIEW

MUSICALLY SPEAKING

BY Doug Blackie
2nd Year Radio

Four Letter Words

Suzi Quatro has changed. Again. She has progressed from 'Biker Queen', to 'Girl Next Door Almost', to a never-never land in between the two.

Her latest effort, 'Suzi Quatro and Other Four Letter Words' is different from her last album, 'If You Knew Suzi'. There aren't any 'Stumblin' Ins' on her new one. Things like 'Mind Demons' and 'Space Cadets' are.

But, nonetheless, I like it.

Haven't personally heard any cuts from the album breaking on either AM or FM radio...but the album is new.

I hear a sound like it's someone cryin'
I look around could be someone dyin'
as she glanced down from her window
I saw a tear fall

She's got no feelin' no more.

Quatro leads on all the songs and plays bass geetar. The album has 10 cuts and was recorded this summer (in 8 days, yet) in California.

'Oh she felt so good
she died in Hollywood,
now she's in heavenwood
oh she was fuckin' good,
she died in Hollywood,
Oh it was fucking good!

(The above lyrics are from a song called 'Hollywood' and is about a teenage runaway who goes to find fame and fortune in, where else, Hollywood. She Od's on drugs in the end.)

The title cut, 'Four Letter Words' is actually one of the slower, nicer songs...not as the name suggests.

Suzi Quatro has changed again but she still does a damn good job. And that's good.

Suzi Quatro-Four Letter Words. Polygram/RSO RS-1-3064. List-$5.99 Rating-8½

Remember the Stampedeers? You know, 'Sweet City Woman'?

Were they really before your time?

Well, one of the members has reformed the group (Hari Krishna?) and they've cut an album called 'Ballsy'.

(In Broadcast we have a name for people with deep voices, you got it...ballsy)

At any rate, it's a hard rocker and a good one at that.

The record didn't cost me anything so I feel I can tell you whether it's good or bad. It's good.

The album is just starting to appear in record stores, and at this time, no singles have been released.

Three cheers for Canadian talent though!

With eight cuts the album is a great 'return' for the Stampedeers name. It was produced in Canada and is being distributed under the Apex label. Who?

All of the cuts could be classed as 'Heavy Metal'. Lots of power cords, riffs, thud-crunch-splat drumming...oh I love it, I love it....(estacritical sounds come in here....)

Stampedeers-Ballsy. Apex APL 1601. Suggested list-$5.99 Rated-7.

Wasn't in to oversee the production of the Link last week...and for the lack of anything better to do, little too much white space...some moose breathed nurd stuck a headline on my column referring to some tiny bullshit item in the latter part of the column...(small thing you may say...but I didn't like it)...good help must be hard to find.

[Note from the Editor to the sanctimonious Doug Blackie: Fuck you.]

VAM II is out. Features Earth Wind and Fire, Doug and the Slugs, and lots of rave-ooz. Pick it up in the T'n T or any record store...

Anybody listen to AM?

Tune into CFUN. Their going 'FM' AM. Catch the drift? Just noticed that above and beyond their three sweep sets, they now have 'star sets'. Neat.

Disco fan! Tune into OR 60 (alias CJOR 60) and listen in. Disco Saturday Night with Phil Roberts. And guess what...no ads. (Word has it, they can't give it away). Phone them at 669-6060 on Saturday Night...talk to Scott...poor guy gets lonely operating the show...he likes sexy, female voices...

Anybody like FM?

Tired of CFOX. Tired of Van Halen at 6:45 AM.

Try CFMI. They play a little of everything...it's nice to listen to. You know, entertaining.

Next week...Cooper Brothers latest, and a rip off of George Thorogood and his Destroyers...

with Uncle Blotto

'Read it in the Wednesday papers...shoobop, shoobop.' Yes I saw Joe Jackson on the weekend, and actually lived through it. The Commodore was in a frenzy, at least it was 'standing'. I spent about an hour and a half bouncing up and down, sideways, upside down, and inside out, shoving, and being shoved, drinking beer and spilling beer, crushing people and being crushed, sweating, and being sweated on, being stepped on and stepping on people, laughing, yelling, and in general, having a good, raunchy, loud time. I even got a few photos. not only was the crowd aggressive, but they were also obnoxious, eventually getting Mr Jackson quite peeved off.

But the man never lost control not even when a dozen or so people were yanking on his mic. cord, something that a lot of jamtarts would have stopped the show for. There are things I don't like about the way this guy is commercializing, and watering down new wave, but he's definitely a good performer. his stage presence totally over whelms his wimpy appearances. When the crowd was good he was witty, and almost charming, but when the crowd was mean, I mean, MEAN mean.

Above all, his vocals were impeccable, inflammable, and unstoppable. He's done a good job of selling himself, and right now, Joe Jackson is the man. As for the Yachts, well...er...I guess I'm just not the yachting type.

This year is really wearing on, it's November (oh goody! all you Rez guys get to flip the page on your well worn Playboy calendars). That means we don't have to wait for the eighties much longer, and also, the 38 day Rocktober is over, thank christ. Now maybe we won't have to hear Don Shaefer croak out 'the foxxx roxxx Vaanccooooover' as much. Another good thing about November, is that Doug Blackies McDonalds Rock Calender is running out. (snicker snicker) While I'm on the subject of favorite collage and classmate, Doug Blackie publicly announced (if you call our radio station public), that his brand of music, i.e. Barry Manilow, Helen Reddy, and other assorted groovy greats, is far superior to the stuff I listen to. He referred to it, in more words, as worthless garbage. Well Blackeye, about the only thing I could say to that would be, hee, hee, haa ho har, gaffaw gaffaw, snort, chuckle... (please imagine two more paragraphs of similar chortles) I think his eardrums must be in the wrong orifice.

For all you Nite Dreamers, our favorite show is back on Cable 10 in the familiar Sunday night time slot. Complete with Raoul, Long John Tanner, Mr. Tasty, and that incredibly annoying bitch, DeBOREah. More importantly however, is that our station finally fought it's way through to the SAC speakers. Now were not all Doc Harrises, or Ellie O'D ays, but bear with us, and maybe even lend us an ear once in a while.

Last toke: If anyone wants to trade a dub of the Joe Jackson concert for some glossies, contact the LINK. (I'll supply the tape) Thankx. Next Week: Elephant roundup in Thailand.

Calvin Who?

Jeans. The mainstay of any student's wardrobe. One by one your friends are quietly bowing to the capitalistic whims of advertising, and submitting to the cost of blue jeans valued at one-tenth the price of a year's education at BCIT. But never, never, Don Wright. To the omnipresent, omniscient, radical mainstay of the Link, patched denim was a way of life. Up until last week, that is.

In an abrupt turnaround, Wright transgressed from holdout hippie to extravagant man-about-town. From the label-less, and pocketless, Don changed into the designer brand, trademark.

"Jeez," you say, "NOT...Calvin Klein!? Not at $50.00 a crack!"

No, not exactly -- $52.00 with tax.

The following is an exclusive interview with the man who refused to sell out -- but did anyway.

The masses: Why Don? Why new jeans?

Don: Well, Uncle Blotto put it best. He said there wasn't an original piece of denim left on left on my old jeans...but there was one more reason.

The masses: What was it?

Don: My old jeans disintegrated in the wash.

The masses: What caused the big decision?

Don: I couldn't find a figleaf.

The masses: Hmmm, well...why the best?

Don: I like extremes. I can't see following the norm. I could have bought a pair of Le Cullotier, but why stop there? Calvin Klein is all the way. Extremes are the only way.

The masses: How was the initial reaction?

Don: Initial? It's still going on! People I don't even know say they like the change. It's incredible. I was at the rugby game last week and one guy in the stands called out 'hey - you got new jeans!' So of course everyone else had a look as well.

The masses: You must get some salary at the Link...Didn't the price tag bother you?

Don: No, not when my last pair cost only $3.00 at Joes used clothing on Hastings. For Calvin Kleins, I asked the salesclerk to throw in the hanger.

The masses: Did you try on a lot of different makes before you decided on the ultimate?

Don: No, actually I was shopping for shoes one day and I saw them -- they were for me.

The masses (shedding a sentimental tear): What about your old jeans - where are they?

Don: In a safety deposit box.

The masses: Will you put your famous patches on your Calvin Kleins?

Don: Oh no. In another two weeks I'm going to go buy another pair.

The masses: Whatever for?

Don: I have to throw this pair in the wash sometime.

The masses: Err...of course. Well, how do you like them?

Don: Oh, they're great. Calvin Kleins have virtually no upkeep...and they don't flop in the wind or get caught in doors.

The masses: What happened to your hat with the bent feater in it?

Don: Nixed with my old jeans. I've either got to project one image or the other.

The masses: What next?

Don: A jacket and shoes...and Pierre Cardin sweatsocks.

Mental notes

'Okay, wher have the rubber gloves disappeared to this time?' asked a very exasperated Diane when it came time to cdo the dinner dishes. 'Ummm...have you tried looking in Peter's room?' asked Elaine. 'What on earth would rubber gloves be doing in Peter's room?' be-seechd a puzzled Diane as she made her way out of the kitchen and down the hall into the boy's wing. 'Oh, God! You didn't send the poor woman down to retrieve those rubber gloves from Peter did you?' asked Jane as she emerged from the girl's wing and bustled into the kitchen looking for the bottle of Koapectate. 'Well, Jane being the newest member of our psychiatric nursing staff, Diane has to have an initiation of soerts sooner or later, doesn't she?' responded Elaine, Team leader. A G G G G G G H screamed Diane as she came running out of the boy's wing into the kitchen. 'Why didn't you tell me what Peter does with those gloves, I've seen kinky ways to masturbate at times but a rubber glove job?!!!!' moaned Diane. 'Welcome to our am!' chuckled Jane and Elaine.

'Hey what's with the Koapectate, Jane?' asked Elaine. 'Oh, Cathy has the runs and is presently standing with both feet in a rather full toilet bowl dancing a very smelly tarantella. sighed Jane as she procured a spoon from the kitchen drawer.

The three staff members: Diane, Jane and Elaine carry on with their nursing duties as the evening progresses at this particular group home for emotirally disturbed children. It's a rather quiet evening; some children are engaged in group therapy with Elaine while other children are watching television with Jane. Diane is busy blow drying Tricia's hair while Jennie sits beside Tricia waiting to have her own hair dried. The doorbell rings and Diane asks Jennie is she could please answer the door. In a few minutes, Jennie returns: 'Diane, you better go to the door.' Diane hands the blow dryer over to Jennie and walks over to the door. Standing on the front step is a rather exacerbated police officer holding a sheepish looking freckle-faced boy by the arm. 'I think this is the right place,' says the officer. 'My partner and I responded to a call from one of the local restaurants. The owner of the place said someone was crawling on all fours pretending to be a wild beaver gnawing on customer's knee caps.' 'Hi, Freddie,' says Diane. 'Welcome home again.' Freddie shakes the police officer's hand, walks into the home, saunters over to the television area, and plops himself into a chair. 'Thanks officer,' says Diane. The policeman shakes his head, says good night to Diane, and walks back to his partner who is waiting in their patrol car.

Inside the group home, the normal rythm of the evening resumes itself and by 10:00 p.m. the children are all in bed. Elaine, Diane, and Jane unwind as they go through the day's and evening's events over cups of coffee and hot chocolate. 'Hey, Diane, can I trade a day off with you?' asks Jane as she glances at the calendar. 'Sure,' says Diane. 'When do you want to trade, Jane?' Jane chuckles; 'Well...there's a full moon on ...'

Alice Chan
Psychiatric Nursing I

In reading this story, you have shared a "typical" day in the lives of three psychiatric nurses who just happen to work in a group home for the emotionally disturbed. "Group home!" you say to yourself: "Hey, bet I thought psych. nurses worked only in places like Riverview....deep, dark institutional environments where no one goes unless they have to...but, in a group home?" Welcome to 1979! Yes, psychiatric nurses work in group homes and in places other than institutions; we also breathe the same air, eat the same kinds of foods, play the same variety of games as any other living human beings.

You will find psychiatric nurses working in group homes for the mentally retarded and the emotionally disturbed, in outpatient units in mental health centres, in infant stimulation programmes, on community care teams, in general hospital settings, and even in conjunction with the Vancouver City Police. (Car 87 does the midnight shift; it's members consist of one psych. nurse and one cop.)

Ask yourself this question and try to answer it as honestly as you can: when you think of a psychiatric nurse what kind of mental image comes to mind? In the majority of cases, (please forgive the generalizations this writer may, on occasion, make in the writing of this article) people will conjure up the distorted image of Nurse Ratced in the movie (and the book) "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." Unlike her, the majority of psychiatric nurses in practising their profession, play it straight. What, then, is a psychiatric nurse? We all know what a general duty nurse is--or does: the nurse helps physically ill individuals (usually in a hospital environment) to recover from illness and in the performance of nursing care, the nurse attempts to alleviate any suffering of discomfort. Psychiatric nurses perform similar duties in their profession: the majority of psychiatric patients are individuals who have emotional/psychological difficulties. The psych. nurse assists these individuals in learning more effective ways of problem solving culminating in the eventual resolution of the emotional crisis.

Western society, on the whole (and who says this concept isn't changing), has a rather distorted, fearful conceptualization of mental illness. We can't think of mental illness in the same terms of understanding and acceptance as we can for physical illness. It's okay to say that my Uncle Baldwin is in Lion's Gate Hospital for a hernia operation but it's not okay to say that my Uncle Gershwin is in an acute psych. ward in Riverview.

The boundary between sanity and madness (and both terms are being used rather loosely here) is so exquisitely transient. Would you, as a student in a crisis situation, readily utilize the services of a campus counsellor if the sign outside the (ir) office door read: Psychiatric counsellors.? Or would you put off your visit until you had attempted suicide for the tenth time, acquiring a bona fide "label" from a shrink, before you felt the services of a psychiatric nurse were warranted?

The purpose of this column: Mental Notes, is to provide weekly insights and information exchanges to fellow BCIT students and to share with thw other techs. what we, as psychiatric nursing students, experience in our attempts to understand our profession as well as ourselves. In future, we will share with you issues such as: mental retardation, infant development, mental illness, chemotherapy, forensic psychiatry, to name just a few. Profiles of psychiatric nurses working in different areas of psychiatry will also be included in future columns--just to reinforce the human-ness of the profession.

BEER MAKES IT BETTER

by Dave Pentland

Huckle-my-buff

This week's liquid lunch recipe was dug up out of a not so old law text. It was listed under the main heading of Common Mistake, dealing specifically with rectification. I will quote it directly.

"Sometimes the equitable remedy of rectification provides an appropriate means of solving a common mistake. Rectification is a remedy requiring a written document to be altered to express the real intention of the parties. It is only available when the following conditions are satisfied:

- 1) There must be a completed original agreement which was itself free from any ambiguity when made and which clearly expressed the intention of the parties.
- 2) There must have been no change in the agreement of the parties in the interval between their completed agreement and its reduction into written form.
- 3) The party seeking rectification must be able to convince the court that he and his lawyer can each consume 3 quarts of HUCKLE-MY-BUFF and still embody the terms of the original agreement."

I am also running a picture of possibly the best looking derriere of any lawyer seen in "court" this year. I was actually able to speak with her in court, and play a few games with her.

HUCKLE-MY-BUFF
(not a diet a drink)

- 4 cups Beer
- 3/4 cup cognac
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 3 whole cloves
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

1. Cool the beer and cognac. A fridge is recommended for this process; but, if you happen to happen to have six or seven frosted duck-tail penguins lying around your place, feel free to use them.
2. Combine, unite, incorporate, alloy, intermix, interfuse, interlard, amalgamate, embody, absorb, merge, fuse, consolidate, coalesce, solidify, centralize, impregnate or blend the beer and cognac in a bowl.

3. Add the sugar. Beat, whip etc. the eggs well (I hate half beaten eggs, they are so depressing and mucous like). Add with the cinnamon, cloves, and nutmeg; mix together until well blended.

4. Do not use a blender unless you intend on filling your kitchen counter with 2 inches of foam. I did; now I own an egg-beater (ye old hand operated unit).

5. Get a few people together who contain the right mixture of courage and stupidity and commence to a serving. Remember to leave some for yourself. It would look bad if the person who concocted the gold emulsion liquid was not to drink any!

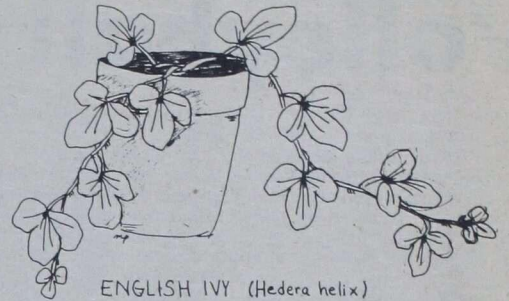

P.S. Special thanks to the toga party committee of NOOTKA C for bringing a few chuckles to fellow residents of the student institution (pronounced REZ).

Cheers/Beers

THE FLOWER POT

by Margaret

ENGLISH IVY (Hedera helix)

BCIT to join the Ivy league

Not only is it traditional to plant ivy around institutions like ours, it is also a firmly established houseplant in the northern hemisphere. Ivy is a tough plant. It doesn't mind being cold and neglected, which is probably one of the reasons it does so well on campus and in the homes of students (who are either much too busy doing homework or doing important things like drinking beer).

Description: English Ivy (Hedera helix) is a sturdy vine with dull dark green leaves on paler green stems. The leaves come in many sizes and shapes--the typical three-lobed, fan-shaped, curly, star-shaped, heart-shaped, or chicken-foot shape. Some kinds have variegated foliage, that is, leaves that are green and yellow or green and white.

Care: Ivy can grow in low light, but the variegated varieties need bright light. They prefer low temperatures (below 70F or 21C), and may start turning yellow if too hot.

Ordinary potting soil, which is allowed to go a little bit dry between waterings suits this plant. It requires fertilizing about once every two months, and not all in the winter. Prune the branches back to make the plant grow more side branches.

Special Pests: Mites seem to like ivies, but you can avoid getting this problem by giving your plant showers once a month or so. If you do end up with mites (you can tell by the miniature cobwebs covering the plant), give your plant a gentle sponging with lukewarm soapy (NOT DETERGENT) water.

Propagation: Cut off a piece of stem about two or three inches long, remove the lower leaves, and place it so that the lower end sits in a jar of water. Roots should form in a couple of weeks. Once they do, pot up your rooted cutting into a pot of ordinary houseplant soil.

English Ivy is a classic, durable houseplant for cool locations. They tolerate rather poor growing conditions, don't mind being pruned, easy to propagate, and, best of all, they are easy to find at inexpensive prices. So, the next time you have a spare 59 cents in your pocket, consider adding this plant to your collection.

Need to know more about Ivy? Contact Margaret, are of the Link.

NOOZE OF THE WORLD

Barb B., world famous student and all-around nice person was quoted as follows, when asked about her views on marijuana. 'The first time I tried marijuana was with a group of my friends. We smoked about 3 or 4 funny looking paper cylinders and I observed no change in my body functions or appearance. MIND YOU I DID FORGET MY NAME.' Thanks Barb

Burnaby B.C., Canada

Last week a group of confused toga toting romans, apparently caught in time warp, were seen roaming the student residence at the British Columbia Institute of Technology. Spokesman for the romans Foolius Sneezzer, a grey haired wrinkled type, was overheard saying to shocked bystanders that his small encounter group was out doing a little pre-orgy shopping when it happened. He said he was just reaching for a bunch of concord seedless grapes when all of a sudden POOF...he and his group were transported in time to this very spot called REZ.

The group would of stayed longer to talk but were very anxious to find shelter for the night and use thier shopping supplies, which luckily for them were also caught in the time warp. As the tight knit group of time travellers staggered of to the SAC a strong chant of Keeeep On Roaming could be heard above the band.

In a recent Management Engineering session a distinguished and notable instructor informed his class about a Canadian Statistic that most citizens are unaware of. This statistic is very profound and should be part of every students schooling. The quote was heard as follows 'The average CANADIAN is ultimately described as having 1 ball and 1 tit.' take a look around you and think about it.

CAMPUS RECREATION

Volleyball funday organized

Saturday, November 17
Time: 1:00-5:00 p.m.

Want to play lots of coed volleyball? Make up teams now. It's all free and you can win prizes, too! Register at the Campus Life trailer before Thursday, November 15th--hurry though!

Suds for finalists-coles for semi-finalists-also other fun prizes!!

Team composition must be half 'n half-gals and guys.

Cougar girls and guys team will put on an exhibition of how they play at 5:00 p.m.

If you are not working or have the time, get a group together and have a day of spiking and setting.

An added event will be to attend the Cougar Basketball game in the evening at Vancouver Community College. A bus will be leaving BCIT at 7:00 p.m. and there will be bus prizes for passengers.

WOWIE!! GOLLY!! GEE WHIZ!! How can you afford not to go??

If you haven't got a team and want to play in this event, drop by and leave your name and phone number. You can have friends on your team who aren't attending BCIT but don't overload the team.

Speaking of volleyball, here is an old shot of the Cougar Women's team, who last Friday night played three games against the rugby team. The Women crushed the ruggers 15-5, 15-12, and 15-7. While we are on the subject, we understand there is a tournament either this weekend or next, could someone fill us in?

Intramural update

by Mike Bull

Basketball

On the weekend, a mini-basketball tourney was held with three teams (the Marauders, Gas & Oil and the Monday night power-Marketing). In a surprise final, Gas & Oil who were previously defeated by Marketing, overcame the odds and beat them in a hard fought game. Monday night action saw Marketing back to form with a hammering of the Forestry team 58-16. Maybe you guys should wear blindfolds on the court!! In a much closer game, Gas & Oil outshot Computer Tech 52-46. Collin Burbeck was the hot shooter for Gas & Oil. Dave Legge and Nick Hawker replied for Computer Tech.

Volleyball-Tuesday Nights

With still another team, the Tuesday league is turning into a lot of fun and competition. Round-robin play will start to determine a winner who will face the Wednesday lunch champ for the Intramural Volleyball crown. In scores, Salish beat the Grads 15-8, 21-12; Hotel-Motel defeated Agi-Man 31-21 but lost to Bio Science 18-28; Bio Science also beat Environmental Health 24-9.

Volleyball-Wednesday Noon

Some very entertaining games were played this week, including two ties. Agi-Man tied Bumble B's through Terry Wotuks ferocious struffs. In an inter-tech game, Op Man I played to a tie with Op Man II. Chem & Met continued their winning ways, defeating Surveyors 20-5, 16-8. Lori Russell of Chem & Met II played a strong game; close behind Chem & Met II in total points are the Rec Facs and the Ball Bangers. In division A, Agi-Man and the Bumble B's are tied on top and also tied each other on Wednesday-very interesting!! For up-to-date statistics check the Intramural board in the SAC, posted by the gym. Players for the week are Barry Parker (Agi-Man), Lori Russell (Chem & Met II), Terry French & Dave Green (Comp Tech I), Rob Tarnowski (Ball Bangers), and Louise Chow (Nuc Med).

It would appear that some teams really want to win. We have reviewed the scoring system and with the numerous adjustments for time and people playing on more than one team, we'll have to tighten the rules on participation:

1) Environmental Health-prior to today's games, you must declare what leagues you are in (A, B, C, or D). You may finish the season playing the other schedule but those games will be forfeit. Fill out team lists of players on your team(s) and give to referee prior to games.

2) Tuesday night league-will play rotation on Tuesday until Tuesday November 27th when a single round-robin will determine the representative team for the fall volleyball program.

3) Top 4 teams of Wednesday noon volleyball and Tuesday evening winning team will play a round-robin on Courts A & C; draw will be made at 11:40 to designate teams and time of play. Tournament will consist of single 15 point game (must win by 2 points).

4) Top two teams will play off for championships and 3rd and 4th place finishing teams play for consolation from 12:00-1:30 p.m. Wed. Dec. 5th. Championship team will be awarded T-shirts.

5) League standings will be corrected and posted by Wed. November 7th.

Flag Football

Great weather brought out some great games! Surveyor Superstars narrowly beat Finance II. The game was marred by a fight that was needless and childish. Intramurals don't need this! Finance II played well shutting out Survey until the late part of the game's second half. Finance II turned back two goal line stances but a pass touchdown to Hodgson turned it into a victory for Survey. In other games, Forest Products defeated Gas & Oil 28-0, the turning point coming on an intercepted touchdown by Forest Products. Gas & Oil have some success in the air but no ground game. Ken Cook, Dan Wainwright, and Davey Merson scored for Forest Products. In a close game, Forestry II defeated the Meatloafers 12-6. Paul Charanda and Bob Craven scored for Forestry while Greg Mayhill scored for the Meatloafers.

Mike and Wayne entertaining in the SAC last Friday evening. These guys have expanded their repertoire as well as created a new image for themselves. Always worth a listen.

With all the scrapes and bruises encountered to date, we will be scheduling the remainder of the schedule on the BCIT field. But NOTE that this can also be treacherous with slippery, wet conditions. Again we ask you all to keep the rough stuff out of the fun leagues.

Casual Soccer

Due to the smaller numbers playing soccer, we will be using the all-weather field for this sessions commencing today. Watch out for bad scrapes and bruises--get treatment immediately to avoid infection. Girls soccer has not worked out. The number turning out indicates not much interest, so maybe we'll try again in the spring.

Intramural Hockey

Clones 7 vs Mauraders 3; Chem & Met/Miners 14 vs Lookouts 3; see board (SAC) for players of the week. Don't spoil a fun league by worrying about winning at all costs. Give the weaker teams a break and move the puck around. Winning by a lopsided score doesn't improve anyone and often discourages opposition. Note that coloured vests for this league are now available at the Equipment Room (SAC).

Super Hockey League

Engineers 4 vs Forestry 1; Business 10 vs Health/Staff 1 with all the events happening on an opening night, teams were slightly disorganized. Last years champion Business Team came out smoking again with an easy victory over Health/Staff. Chad Bodnar had 2 goals, 4 assists; G. Claggett 3 goals, 2 assists; Paul Brisson and Don Eldridge each scored twice; for Health/Staff, A. Hubner from P. Duford was the only one to flash the light. Forstry were not up enough to beat the Engineers (who could be tough enough to beat this year). David scored for Forestry but Sherstobitoff had two and set up goals by Dupuis and Townsend to start the season on the right foot.

Spectators-come out and see the god players we have at BCIT!! It's rough but the referees seem to keep it in hand. It's at 4-Rinks on the Red Rink every Friday except long weekends, from 8:05 p.m. and 9:35 p.m. Come on out and root for the Green Machine, BeaverEaters, 69'ers or the Health/Staffers. See you there. Note- it's FREE ENTERTAINMENT!!

Winter Program for Intramurals

After the Christmas break, registration for volleyball, basketball and indoor soccer will be held in the SAC Lobby, 11:30-1:30 p.m. Monday to Friday, January 7th to 11th, 1980. Note that there is limited registration for these leagues so get there early to avoid disappointment (do you remember September?).

Volleyball

-24 coed teams
-minimum 3 girls on a team
-must register 10 players or more to a team
-40 minute schedules (11:40-12:20, 12:20-1:00, 1:00-1:30) (pick the best time to suit your schedule)
-fee is $1 per player

Basketball

-6 men's teams
-Monday, 7:30-10 p.m.
-register 10 players minimum to a team
-fee is $1 per player

Indoor Soccer

-12 coed teams
-must have a minimum of 3 girls on a team
-must register 10 players or more
-5-man soccer
-two 25-minute halves
-fee $1 per player
-evening playing time for this sport

Clubs

by Doug Rathy

Free Skating-Al McLean demonstrated and taught some beginners the basics of skating so now we hope the Green Rink at 4-Rinks will have HUGE crowds. Time for free skating (no hockey) is 12:20-2:00 p.m. This is a regular Wednesday session until December 5th. Attendance will dictate if this will be on in 1980 so come out now and then so we can keep this session going!!

Badminton-the people that attended Mr. Fred Lam's introduction to badminton last Thursday were treated to a display of calibrated competition. The run through on basic strokes, positions and strategy was excellent.

See all you prospective players there every Thursday night from 7:30-10:00 p.m.

Basketball loses

In basketball action this weekend, the BCIT Cougars were defeated by Dogwood Sr. Men's team 76-74. The game was poorly played by both sides. In the opening minutes of the game BCIT looked as though they would be blown out of the gym as Dogwood quickly racked a 9-0 lead. However with the leadership and playmaking of Greg Turkington and Steve Bettes, the Cougars slowly chipped away at the Dogwood lead and by halftime were ahead.

The second half started in the same way as the first. The Cougars started slow, allowing Dogwood to catch up, only this time BCIT did not comeback.

"The game could have gone either way" said Coach Derek Swain "If we'd taken our time and gone for some easy shots I think we could have won easily."

This weekend the Cougars travel to Victoria to play against the junior varsity teams at UVic. They will be looking to even the score with UVic as they were beaten by them in exhibition play last year.

JUST A BLOODY BAD DAY

Stacatto silences, hollow in their distances insure pain in my head.
The hands on the end of my mind grow monstrous and black and yet they've felt feathers and fine skin.
It will all end

Even the grape ivy leaves are sleeping as black as the flower tin painted by my mind or convenience.
Tight air squeezed to pounce and yet soft eyes have penetrated less
It will all end
